

Wigdor LLP Represented AIG Employees

March 16, 2010 • Results

Wigdor LLP was able to protect its clients' interests in the face of threats and intimidation by elected officials and the public.

Wigdor LLP represented a large group of employees from AIG Financial Products Corp. in connection with the payments that they received pursuant to their legally binding retention agreements with the company, which led to a public outcry. Wigdor LLP's team of lawyers advised and protected these employees from the enormous amount of pressure by the federal and local governments, the media, the public, as well as AIG, to convince them to voluntarily return the money they earned under their contracts.

The Washington Post

"Ex-employees of AIG's Financial Products unit might sue over lower payouts"

March 16, 2010

Read PDF

The Washington Post

"AIG Executives' Promises to Return Bonuses Have Gone Largely Unfulfilled"

December 23, 2009

Read PDF