Krunali Parekh, a female business development specialist at Dentons, is suing the global law firm and her supervisor, Alton Delane, the male managing director of the firm's venture technology group.

Parekh alleges Delane sexually harassed her and that the firm's human resources officials forbade her to discuss her complaints.

Dentons is "deeply troubled by the allegations against a non-lawyer employee, which are contrary to our values and culture of respect," the law firm told Bloomberg Law in a statement June 11. The firm said it is conducting an ongoing investigation.
