The woman who has accused Leon Black of sexually assaulting her asked a New York state judge to throw out his counterclaims against her.

In a filing late Thursday, Guzel Ganieva said wasn't out to gain attention or to "destroy or damage" the private-equity billionaire but simply used a social-media platform to break her silence "like many other women in recent years."

Ganieva sued Black for defamation in June, and he'd filed counterclaims against her last month.
